Meharry project approved; 'What do we do now?'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following appeared as a regular column in the Carmel Pine Cone, written by Carmel City Councilman Gunnar Norberg, and concerns the board of supervisors' recent approval of the Meharry motel, to be located at the mouth of Carmel Valley. The City of Carmel filed and lost an appeal seeking to halt the project.

By GUNNAR NORBERG

"WHAT DO WE do now?

This question, with variations, is one I have been hearing again and again during the past two weeks, ever since the county board of supervisors voted on June 11 to allow that Meharry-proposed 162-unit hotel with its accompanying shops and convention facilities to be constructed on a residentially zoned five-acre site at the intersection of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard in the Carmel Rancho shopping center at the entrance to the Carmel Valley on the flood-plain of the Carmel River.

Unfortunately there is no easy answer to the question we posed at the start of this column.

The reason for this is that the issuance of a so-called use permit as a kind of "extra" over-and-above what a specifically defined zoning classification provides, is considered in the law to be merely an administrative act instead of a basic legislative act.

In the case of the five-acre Meharry tract, the basic zoning of the property is essentially residential. The county zoning description is identified as "R-3-D-B-4." This means that the Meharry property is part of what's called a "limited multiple family residence" zone. This in turn, means only single-family dwellings or, at the most, duplexes, can be constructed on the property unless a use permit for other purposes is applied for and granted.

According to the "R-3" portion of country's number-and-letter zoning jargon, it is therefore permissible only to construct single-family or two-family dwellings. The capital letter "D" in that "R-3-D-B-4" zoning description on the Meharry parcel simply means the county planning commission reserves the right to exercise design control on any building plans to be used for constructing those single-family or two-family dwellings.

The last part of the Meharry zoning designation--B-4--means that either the single family dwellings or the duplexes cannot be too close together. The "B-4" provision means there can be only one dwelling--either a single-family or a two-family one--per acre on a site such as the Meharry five-acre tract we are talking about here.

Therefore, if only the basic authority of that "R-3-D-B-4" zoning were to have been exercised on the Meharry five-acre parcel, there could only have been either five single-family dwellings, or, at the most, five duplexes, on the entire tract.

How could anything like the 162-unit Meharry hotel have been authorized under the "R-3-D-B-4" zoning?

The answer is that much of county zoning is a kind of hodge-podge in which a zone is basically residential can instead be put to some obviously commercial use, such as that 162-unit Meharry hotel, if the developer can manage to get permission from the county planning commission or from the county zoning administrator, Robert Slimmon, through the use permit procedure.

In the case of the Meharry property, County Zoning Administrator Slimmon received the request for authority to build that 162-unit hotel a year ago and he approved it in August of last year. Decisions either by the zoning administrator or by the county planning commission can be brought before the county board of supervisors in accord with a specified appeal procedure, and this was done last summer. In October the supervisors reversed the decision of their zoning administrator and turned down the Meharry 162-unit hotel proposal by a 3-2 vote.

The deciding vote in that 3-2 decidion was that of Supervisor Willard Branson, who represents the district in which the proposed Meharry hotel is to be located.

But, you might ask, wasn't Branson's deciding vote again the week before last--but, this time, on the opposite side of the question?

That is quite true. It is, in fact, just that switch in Supervisor Branson's vote on the Meharry hotel proposal which has brought many people to pose the what-do-we-do-now question--the one with which we began this column and the one for which there is no easy answer.

As we have already said, the courts have generally construed actions such as the issuance of "use permits" as being simply administrative acts instead of fundamental legislative ones. Because of this, the right of the people to use the referendum route against use permits has generally been denied.

WHILE IT WOULD ordinarily be true that government could not function if any and all administrative acts were to be subject to public challenge by referendum, it is also true there are some kind of acts which usually are called administrative but have, in fact, easily discernible legislative characteristics.

In the case of the Meharry use permit approval which will allow a 162-unit hotel on a five-acre site simply zoned for either single-family or two-family dwellings, each on a one-acre minimum site, the ordinary citizen would consider that kind of residential-to-commerical conversion much more like a new legislative zoning rather than as only a mere administrative decision which is defined as being a kind of offshoot of the county's "R-3-D-B-4" classification.

I believe readers can see something of the problem presented by Branson's reversal-of-position on the Meharry hotel use permit.

Because the use permit procedure is generally considered by the courts to be an administrative one even when, as in the Meharry case, it seems to voters generally to be much more like a legislative one, there seems to be little hope in suggesting to questioners that they could try to attack the granting of the Meharry use permit through the referendum process.

What, them, is left for anguished individuals or alarmed organizations to consider?

There is a drastic one. As readers no doubt know, there are three procedures by means of which the electorate in a given locality can act directly upon government and upon the acts of government. These procedures are initiative, referendum, and recall.

Since it is unlikely that referendum (or initiative) could be used with any reasonable chance of success, only the last of the three procedures could be tried, even though that, by itself, would not automatically reverse the authorization for that 162-unit Meharry hotel, even if it were to be successful.

The recall of an elected official is not only a difficult procedure and an unpalatable one from many points of view, but it is one generally not even attempted except as a kind of desperate last resort.

The only reason, I believe, why any thought is being given even to the possibility of considering a recall action against Supervisor Branson, is not only his reversal of position on the Meharry hotel proposition but also because of his last year's vote on the still-contested 3-2 rezoning of the eastern half of the Odello artichoke ranch.

While the fifth supervisorial district, which Branson represents, includes the electorate of the City of Carmel and of much of the cities of Monterey and Pacific Grove, it is largely in the unincorporated areas around Carmel and up the Carmel Valley and down the Coast the county board of supervisors has specific planning and zoning control. It is therefore of most immediate concern to voters in those locations just how county supervisors perform their governing function.

Since cities are allowed a say for a distance up to three miles beyond their city limits in the consideration by county officials of planning and zoning matters within what's called the cities' "Zone of influence," the City of Carmel is also properly concerned in the county's planning and zoning decision-making in the Carmel Rancho area where the proposed 162 unit Meharry hotel is to be contructed. It was because of this concern that the City of Carmel formally appealed to the county board of supervisors to reverse the county zoning administrator's use permit stand and thus to deny the Meharry request.

It is because county supervisors rejected the City of Carmel appeal the week before last, and thus allowed the Meharry hotel use permit to stand, that not only the City of Carmel but also the many organizations which expressed similar views, now feel greatly downcast and greatly saddened. And it is because of this that some have even ventured to think of recall as the only remaining remedy.

It is my hope, and that of many other people, that Supervisor Branson will give what they consider sympathetic consideration to their desires for great restraint and great care in guiding any future development in the whole Carmel River flood-plain.

Only with such a sensitive and sympathetic guiding view can posterity have any chance to know and enjoy the Carmel River environs we enjoy today.

THERE PROBABLY is little to be gained by whipping a dead horse. However, facts still bear out that the wisdom of the decision of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors in denying the appeal of the City of Carmel against the ruling of the county zoning administrator who approved the 162-unit Meharry Development in the mouth of the Carmel Valley is certainly open to question.

That the traffic on Highway 1 out of Carmel Valley is fast getting worse cannot be denied by anyone. Anyone checking the JPA bus fares out of the area would indeed have to be an optimist to believe public transportation out of the Carmel Valley is alleviating the situation.

The Public Utilities Commission placed a definite restriction on additional water connections not only in the valley but on the entire Monterey Peninsula and that interim order is still in effect.

Every public body that has been concerned with water availability in our area has expressed doubts as to the quantities that can be produced in Carmel Valley, surface and underground, and the ability to meet the foreseeable demands even with restricted residential and commercial demands.

It was pointed out that the State Department of Water Resources June 10 report was optimistic on supplies of underground water. However, their report was based principally on known data which was also the data available to the Public Utilities Commission in its moratorium.

And on June 17 Col. J. L. Lammie, district engineer with the Corps of Engineers of San Francisco, delivered this report to the Central Coastal Conservation Commission concerning Carmel River water:

"We are still studing the project on the Carmel River for purposes of primarily flood control but perhaps also the water supply, but basically there are two alternatives there. One is an enlarged dam at the San Clemente site. That has been held up for a couple of months pending a Department of Water Resources study of ground water alternatives. We have a preliminary report we received on Friday on the results of their efforts and at this time it may not be sufficiently definitive to answer the question, and the question is, is ground water a viable water supply alternative in that area? They've indicated they do need further study before they can come up with the answer.

"In the meantime we're continuing to study the possibility of levee projects along the Carmel River. So we're still sort of up in the air on this thing and we've not really decided on an alternative. But in the event that the water supply as a source must turn to a reservoir project, then an enlargement of the San Clemente project would be feasible, depending upon the water supply storage requested by the local people and the California American Water Company. So again it's somewhat up in the air and I cna't really say which way it's going, but once an alternative is decided, we will be back before the commission. That particular project will require a feasibility report and an environmental impact statement before it goes forward for authorization. So we still have a long way to go on it."

In view of all the facts presented by those with the prime responsiblity for determining water availability, you can draw your own conclusions as to whether we'll be on short rations one of these days. You water your side of the street on odd days and I'll take the even. Sounds like our gasoline rationing, doesn't it?

Further, in view of what difficulties the Carmel Sanitary District has in disposing of digester sludge these days, maybe there should be a closer restriction on additional new connections throughout the area.

Supreme court ruling threatens quality education in CUSD

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article on the local impact of the recent court ruling in the Serrano vs. Priest case, calling for equalization in school financing was written by Richard Wilsdon, a member of the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees and Carmel attorney. Wilson-Wilsdon is active in a broadly-based state-wide organization working to devise a system of financing which would both comply with the judge's decision and preserve "Quality" education in wealthy districts such as Carmel.

BY RICHARD WILSDON

THE CARMEL school district has been in a period of financial uncertainty which will continue for at least several more years.

For many years school districts in California were funded through a system whereby the state gave every school district $125 per student; and, if the district had less than average wealth, the district had less than average wealth, the district received additional money called "equalization aid." The balance of the funds for district operation came from the local property taxes and from federal funds. Special programs, such as the program for the educationally handicapped and driver's education, received special funds from the state.

Carmel is a "basic aid" district, which receives only the 125 per student basic aid and no equalization aid. With the exception of a small amount of federal money and state funds for special programs, the balance of the district's operating funds come from the local property tax. Because of its high assessed evaluation per student, Carmel receives a relatively large amount of money per student from the local property tax while enjoying one of the lowest property tax rates in the state.

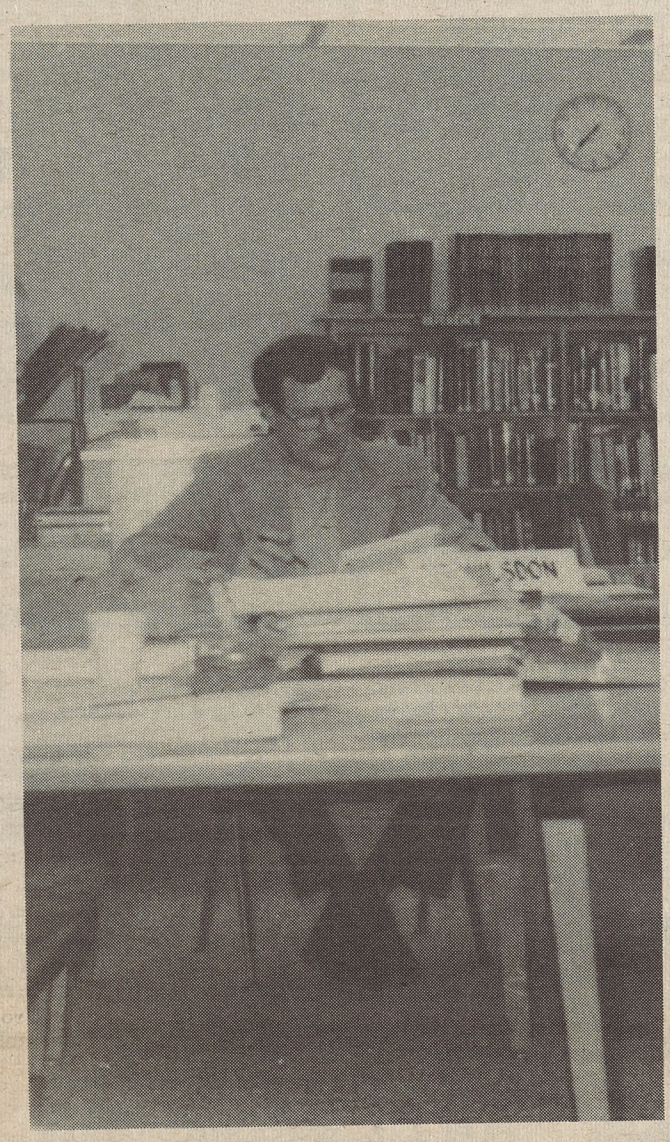
Under the old system, as the assessed evaluation in the district increased through new construction and the reassessment of existing property, the same tax rate brought in the additional dollars needed to cover the cost of more students and increased costs of personnel and supplies.

Several years ago, the California Supreme Court, in its historic decision in the case of Serrano vs. Priest, ruled that this system of school finance was unconstitutional in that it resulted in some districts having far less money available per student for the education of their students than other districts, and that there was undoubtedly a relationship between the amount of money spent and the quality of the program. Thus the quality of the program available to a particular student depended upon the wealth of the district in which he lived.

The Supreme Court referred the matter back to the Los Angeles Superior Court for further action to determine whether there was a relationship between the amount of money spent per student and the quality of the program.

The California legislature, in response to the court's decision, enacted two bills known as Senate Bill 90 and Assembly Bill 1267, which were designed to lessen the gap between high and low wealth districts. Under this legislation, low wealth district receive increased funds from the state while the rate of expenditure of high wealth districts is held to an existing level, with small increases available for inflation. The bills also provide for property tax relief for all districts, a factor which has already reduced Carmel's property tax rate by a substantial amount.

If this were a time of a normal, reasonable rate of inflation, the Carmel school district could have survived the new funding process fairly well. However, the drafters of SB 90 and AB 1267 did not take into consideration the possibility of the virulent inflation we are now experiencing. As a result, Carmel is limited this year to an increase in its revenue of about 2.7 per cent while facing a rate of inflation of about 14 per cent.



RICHARD WILSDON, during a meeting of the board of trustees of the Carmel Unified School District.

Carmel cannot continue to receive increases in its revenue in the area of 2.5 per cent while experiencing increases in the cost of personnel and supplies in the area of 10 per cent or more before the quality of the program will begin to suffer seriously. The proposed budget for the 1974-1975 school year is a very tight budget, but balanced. The budget for the following year will begin to show the effects on programs of the revenue restrictions.

On April 10 of this year, Judge Jefferson of the Los Angeles Superior Court rendered his long awaited memorandum opinion in the Serrano vs. Priest case, which further complicated the school finance picture. In what has come to be known as the "Jefferson decision," Judge Jefferson ruled that the state's method of financing schools, even as modified by SB 90 and AB 1267, is unconstitutional. The judge gave the state six years to devise a new finance system, which provides for a differential of less than $100 per student in the amount of money available per student in every school district in the state.

No one knows at this time what system will eventually be adopted by the legislature; but the major school finance bill now pending before the legislature, authored by Senator Rodda, would increase Carmel's property tax rate by more than $1 per $100 of assessed evaluation while holding Carmel at its present level of income.

Many of the organizations interested in school finance, such as the California School Boards Association, the Association of School Administrators, the California Teachers Association, the League of Women Voters, the Grange, the Farm Bureau, the California PTA, and others, are now working together on a joint effort to devise a new system of school finance to present to the legislature. These groups are attempting to define what "quality education" is, what the components of "quality education," are and how much money is needed to provide an opportunity for "quality education" for every student in this state.

In his decision Judge Jefferson stated:

"The equal-protection-of-the-laws provisions of the California Constitution mandates nothing less than that all such persons shall be treated alike. If such uniformity of treatment were to result in all children being provided a low-quality education program, or even a clearly inadequate educational program, the California Constitution would be satisfied." (Emphasis added.)

The task now before us is to devise a system of school finance which will satisfy Judge Jefferson's standard of equality while at the same time providing a high-quality educational opportunity rather than a low-quality or inadequate program.

For the next few years Carmel will be suffering from the effects of SB 90 and AB 1267, and we can only hope that new legislation will not damage the program even more.

Riverside Park continued until July 10

The planning commission filed a negative declaration on an environmental determination concerning a request to extend the current use permit for Riverside Park campgrounds with the addition of two mobile homes for resident employes.

A public hearing will be held at 1:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 10, to consider a one year renewal of the use permit, which expires July 25, 1974.

According to the existing permit, 20 trailer sites and 15 tent sites are allowed on the grounds located in lower Carmel Valley, and several specific conditions imposed in July of 1973, regulate the operation of the campground.

Attorney Robert Tuttle represented Nicholas Neddelcove, owner and operator of Riverside Rark, at the commission's hearing last Wednesday. Tuttle initially requested that the board consider granting an increase in parking space and interchangeability between tent and trailer sites at the campground, but was discouraged by commissioners from including these amendments in the final proposal for an environmental determination.

In other action, the board approved an on-site sign for Monterey Savings & Loan, presently under construction in the Mid Valley Shopping Center. Approval was granted subject to the following conditions:

--The sign is to be no taller than 10'8";

--The sign is to be lit externally by flood lights;

--Lights illuminating the sign are to be turned off by 10 p.m. each night.

High school gym contract awarded

The Salinas firm of Tombleson, Inc. was awarded the contract for rehabilitation of Carmel High School's gymnasium last Monday with a low bid of $451,820, nearly $75,000 under the rival bid submitted by a San Carlos firm.

The Carmel Unified School District board of trustees had originally estimated the cost of rehabilitating the 33-year old building at $430,000 which came within roughly $20,000 of the contract bid despite spiraling costs due to inflation.

The board's unanimous decision to accept the Tombleson bid came during a special meeting held last Monday morning.

According to Fred Keeble of Carmel, consulting architect, workers will begin tearing the roof from the gymnasium nest Monday, and are expected to complete the rehabilitation within four to six months.

The Tombleson firm, which built the gymnasium at Monterey Peninsula College, will attempt to finish the boys' locker room first and will continue their work through the fall on other parts of the rehabilitation project including:

-- construction of a new roof;

-- installation of a new plumbing, heating, ventilating, electrical, wiring and lighting systems;

-- installation of a new all-purpose composition floor, similar to that installed at MPC;

-- replacement of glass windows with plastic, non-breakable glazing;

--replacement of all doors and hardware.

Safe Nuclear Energy Act

Californians for Safe Nuclear Energy has received an extension until Aug. 2 in its campaign to qualify the Safe Nuclear Energy Act for a general election ballot.

The Safe Nuclear Energy Act requires that within five years of its passage the effectiveness of radioactive waste disposal methods ans safety systems (including the emergency core cooling system) be demonstrated to the satisfaction of two-thirds of the state legislature. If this condition is not met, existing power plants are to be de-rated at 10 per cent per year from their original licensed capacity.

The act also provides that federal limits on compensation for damages from an accident at a nuclear power plant be removed within one year of its passage. Otherwise plants must operate at 60 per cent of capacity or less.

Among the organization supporting this initiative are the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, California Citizen Action, Friends Committee on Legislation, Zero Population Growth, California Democratic Council, and the Scenic Shoreline Preservation Council.

Petitions are available from Mrs. Chesley Bonestell, 25215 E. Stewart Place, Carmel, telephone 624-3101.

Reminder: ban on back yard burning begins July 1

A ban on back yard burning will begin July 1, 1974 for those areas in Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties where refuse service is available, announced Edward W. Munson of the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District last week. The area affected includes Carmel Valley as far east as one mile south of Camp Steffani.

In accordance with the ban, open fires, burn barrels and single chamber incinerators will not be permitted for use in the disposal of household rubbish or yard trimmings. Yard trimmings, may, however, be burned within all areas of both counties on announced "burn" days.

The decision of whether or not burning will be allowed will be made each morning in Sacramento, based on the meteorological conditions of each air basin in the state. KDON radio (1460 AM) will broadcast the "burn" or "no burn" announcement for the Monterey Bay area four times each morning, at 8:20, 9:20, 10:20 and 11:20.

INCORPORATION OF VALLEY

The recently completed Study on the Feasibility of Incorporation for Carmel Valley will be discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce to be held next Wednesday, July 8.

The study was begun in the middle of April by Michael Silberstein, Pomona College graduate, who spent last year as an Intern in Public Affairs for Coro Foundation, a non-profit organization for education and research in public affairs.

The project was sponsored by the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce, which undertook the responsibility, according to its president, Rex White, "merely as a public service, a matter of public information."

"The question of the Valley's eventual incorporation has been kicked around here ever since I came here," White explained. "There have been all sorts of arguments about it and always on the basis of guesswork. We thought that by getting together as many facts as possible, people would be able to think about the Valley's future in a more sensible way."

DON'T PICK 'EM UP, DEAR

Each year at this time a number of well-meaning but misguided people can be expected to adopt fawns, according to the Department of Fish and Game.

People who pick up these and other young animals are creating problems for themselves and for the deer, the DFG says.

Remember, the DFG says, even if a fawn appears to have been abandoned by its mother, the chances are that she is close by and will return to resume her maternal duties if the young animal is not disturbed.

Persons finding fawns whose mothers have been killed should notify the Department of Fish and Game.

REALISM

We all get a yen for adventure, to create some excitement, at least; though it's better by far to stay where we are until all such wild notions have ceased.
I gazed on the ominous ocean, and visioned the fishers of yore who searched the snide sea with a fisherman's glee for the herring or albacore.
So down to the deep in a dory went I with a will and away to catch the quick cod with a snickering rod where the porpoise and halibut play.
There's folks who forget fish can figure -- I learned this too little, too late; I sat there all night with a ghost of a bite, while they gobbled a bale of my bate.
The moral of this salty saga: the shopkeep should stick to his store. My kippers I plan to impinge from a can, and admire the sad ocean from shore.

CORPS PRESENTS DAM STUDY

A dam feasibility and recommendation study for Carmel Valley was presented Wednesday evening by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Brey Library of Carmel High School.

Members of the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee and the general audience asked questions as the proposal was outlined by project engineer John Bradon and Col. Jim Lammie, Corps engineer for the San Francisco district.

Basically, the Corps recommended construction of a multi-purpose (flood control and water supply) dam downstream from the existing San Clemente Dam.

According to a geological survey map, any one of the four possible dams proposed for the site would create a reservoir which would flood the present dam and everything to a point beyond Princess Camp.

The costs of the dams would vary from $23.8 to $40.4 million, Bradon said. In turn, supplemental water supplies created would be from 13,500 acre-feet to 32,500 acre-feet.

Within the propsed area, landowner and committee member Rex White estimated that 70 homesites would be affected. He questioned whether or not the flood control value below the dam would compensate for the personal loss above it.

Camp Quien Sabe accepting summer registration

Camp Quien Sabe, the Monterey Park and Recreation Department's summer camp program is now taking reservations for its program for children, teen-agers and families. The camp is located in Big Sur State Park and it is removed from the state public camping area.

The Quien Sabe regular camping program for younger children aged 5½ who have completed kindergarten to 15 years will be held Monday through Friday on June 24 to 28, July 1 to 5 and July 8 to 12. The children will be transported on Monday mornings by school bus from the Park and Recreation Department to the camp and return Friday afternoon.

Activities are well planned to include nature programs, camp crafts, hikes, swimming and camp cooking. The children and staff sleep out-of-doors in sleeping bags under redwoods. Each day is ended with a rousing campfire program. The weekly fee for this program is $40 for Monterey residents and $45 for non-residents.

The Quien Sabe Work Experience Camp program for teen-agers, 13 to 15 years old, is designed to combine a worthwhile work experience program with a good camping recreation program. The camp is held Monday through Friday, June 24 to 28, July 1 to 5 and July 8 to 12. The teen-agers will also be transported by school bus to the campsite in Big Sur.

The teenagers in this program will spend half a day working in Big Sur State Park doing needed maintenance work under the supervision of a recreation counselor. For their services, the teenagers will be paid a small salary for the week and will be given a job evaluation and recommendation that might be of value in acquiring later employment.

The recreation half of the day will be devoted to camp activities including hiking, swimming, camp skills and campfire activites. The weekly fee for this program is $40 for Monterey residents and $45 for non-residents.

Both regular camp and the work experience camp have additional special activities planned for the week of July 1 to 5 to celebrate the Fourth of July, old-fashioned picnic with sack races, contests and a big cake. This promises to be the best week of all.

For the entire family, a Family Weekend Camp is being held beginning late Friday afternoon, Saturday and Sunday on the weekends of June 28 to 30, July 5 to 7 and July 12 to 14. Fees are $15 for adults (16 and up), $10 for young people (nine to 15), $8 for young children (eight years and under), and no charge for infants who are not yet walking. Fees cover meals, leadership and supplies. Activities are planned to keep the youngsters busy and the adults may join in or just rest and get away from it all.

All Quien Sabe programs have a full time experienced staff, many of whom have been associated with the camp for years. The camp is directed by Donald and Helen Reed.

Registration for the Quien Sabe programs is held at the Monterey Park and Recreation Department office at 546 Dutra St., Monterey, 93940. Register now for the program and sessions of your choice because openings are limited.

Rules for acceptance and participation in all Quien Sabe camping programs is the same for everyone without regard to race, color, or national origin.

Further information is available by calling the department at 372-8121, ext. 281.

UNDER THE OAKS & AMONG THE CACTI

By Mildred Hattan

SPCA Carnival

Summer vacation's just two weeks old, and some youngsters, already bored with long lazy summer days complain, "Ah, Mom, there's just nothing to do!" Others tread a well-worn path to a fishing hole, swimming pool, tennis courts, or ball park.

One group, including Nancy and Sandra Pryer, Katie Kern and Roslind Tucker, assisted by Irene Freeman and Erin Newbon recently organized a benefit carnival for the SPCA. Road signs directed a goodly number to Calle de la Paloma in Robles del Rio where carnival-goers found pony rides, a penny toss, sponge-throw, wagon rides and door prizes.

NUMEROUS SOUVENIERS of the Oakland A's began appearing around the Carmel Valley Little League Park after the announcement was made that the prize for the team selling the most tickets to the League-sponsored 4th of July barbecue would be a trip for the entire team to watch A's in action. Hornets coach Noel Binford is show here handing out additional tickets to team representatives: Charlie Vanetta of the Hornets, Jim Gibbons of the Lions, Raymond Cloyd of the Indians, and David Krueger of the Cubs. Donations are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children. They will be available at the park on the 4th, but buy now and help send a team to Oakland.

Boronda 4-H Club news

Thanks to Charlotte and Sharon Rosburg for the following report:

"The Boronda 4-H Club meeting on June 20, involved the registration of new and old members. New members are Lori George, Kim Neill, Cynthia Marshall, and Grey Rembert.

"All 4-H Club members signed up for projects including: cooking, sewing, home furnishings, sheep, horse, dog care and training, electricity, goats, entomology, junior leadership, photography, poultry, rabbits, and woodworking. Leaders are still needed for bicycling, foods and nutrition, vegetable growing and fruit growing, poultry, leathercraft and wildlife.

"Kevin Hall, junior leader of the horse project, suggested the group form a drill team or color guard. Anyone interested should get in touch with Kevin.

"The horse group, under the leadership of Mrs. Vanderveen, enjoyed a trail ride and picnic on June 8.

Exhibit Day is July 6 at the Lockwood's Rancho El Robledo. There will be a horse show, lamb judging, livestock judging, and electricity and woodworking project exhibits."

Fidelity Club elects officers

When the Fidelity Club of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel resumes its monthly meetings in October, there will be a new board of directors, elected recently at the June potluck dinner meeting.

Taking office will be: Robert Arnal, president; Emil Hansen, vice president; Merle Johnson, secretary-treasurer; and Rev. Don Johnson, program chairman.

Todds en route north

Did those tourists in a camper cruising around the Village last week look familiar? They were former Aliso Road residents Ora and Lloyd Todd, who now reside in Indio.

The couple had heard the "big fish" were running in the Klamath River and had scheduled an overnight stop at the Riverside Camp ground en route north.

THE CARNIVAL organizers added a touch of mystery with a guess-the-number-of-beans-in-the-jar-and-win-all-the-jelly-beans" game. Tricia Martin submits her estimate recorded by Rosiland Tucker. (Photo by George T.C. Smith.)

Hogans receives McKenzie Award

The McKenzie Award, a tribute to the late Don McKenzie, was presented on Saturday at the Carmel Valley Little League Park to Jeff Hogans.

Jeff, a pitcher for the Carmel Valley Fire Department's team, the Volunteers, is the son of Mrs. Nancy K. Hogans of Holman Road and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Kamerer of Poppy Road.

The presentation was made by David McKenzie, nephew of Don McKenzie.

Trophies for the award are contributed to the league by Mrs. Jean McKenzie, now of Loveland, Colo., in memory of her husband, who not only laid a foundation for Little League in the Valley, but also dedicated many years to youth-oriented sports activities.

At the end of each season, coaches and managers meet with the players of each major team to explain the significance of the honor. Boys are asked to vote for a member of their own team who they consider the most inspirational, sportsmanlike, loyal and accomplished. The five representatives are then presented to the coaches and managers for the selection of the best all-around baseball player for the season.

Nominees this year were: "Tiger," Kevin Washington; "Indian," Dick Kirk; "Wildcat," Buz Fulton; "Lion," Jody Moore, and the recipient, "Volunteer," Jeff Hogans.

Vonnie at bat

The official word came from Little League headquarters in Williamsburg on June 12 that girls would be allowed to participate in league play across the country - but Carmel Valley already had Vonnie Hildebrand "on deck" (that's baseball jargon for next player at bat).

Carmel Valley Little League officials had met the night before at the community center to discuss the problem - a girl wanted to play on a Valley Farm team. The board decided not to take a stand. Vonnie, who had not missed a practice all season had been serving as the Plaza Linda "Toros" bat girl.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hildebrand of Robles Del Rio, Vonnie took that first walk from the dugout to the batter's box - her blonde ponytail bouncing under her batter's helmet--and history was made at the Carmel Valley Little League Ball Park on Paso Hondo.

Probably the last 11-year-old Carmel Middle School sixth grader one would typecast to break the mound barrier, Vonnie brings to mind party frocks, "Barbie" dolls, and piano recitals in spring. But put a bat in those soft, dimpled hand and--zap! - the eyes steel, the jaw firms and Vonnie scores. In fact she scored the winning run in her first series game last week against the Bank of America Hornets, which ended in a score of 19-18.

Toros coach Ron Alexander has fought for Vonnie's right to play on a Little League team since he first learned of her sincere desire to be a part of the sport. Ron is justifiably proud of his young protege as are the rest of the team, including Vonnie's brother Michael, who is playing his second season with the Toros. As long as she maintains her current batting average, Mike doesn't object to her playing out there in right field -- not one bit!

Book sale July 12-13

The Friends of Harrison Memorial Library are requesting donations of books for their benefit book sale scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on July 12 and 13 in one of the shops not yet occupied in Carmel Plaza.

The organization now consists of 200 members from Carmel and Carmel Valley, according to former Valleyite Mrs. Janet Gaasch, who is president of the active group.

In addition to the usual collection of surplus library books, the Friends of Harrison are soliciting cook books, text books, children's books, magazines, records, and sheet music.

Donations may be brought to the library desk, or donors may call 624-4629 for pick-up service.

Chairman of the event is Mrs. Hank (Marge) Adams, and publicity is being handled by Florence Tonkin.

September wedding

St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Robinson Canyon - of course - was selected by Becky Margaret Brock for her September marriage to Daniel J. Akerblom. Rev. and Mrs. James W. Brock recently announced the engagement of the young couple, who are both attending California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo.

Becky is currently a sophomore majoring in animal science, and Dan, a senior majoring in industrial management.

A graduate of Carmel High School, Becky will be assisted with wedding plans by her sister, Amy, and brothers, Michael and Joel.

Dan graduated from Santa Monica High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Akerblom, who, with daughters, Patricia and Diane, and son, Robert, all reside in Los Angeles.

Recycle aluminum for CVCYC sake!

The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center has for some time sponsored an aluminum recycling program. Valley residents are invited to leave cans, foil, T.V. dinner plates etc., in bags or boxes at the front door of the center on Ford Road.

Profits will be used for the youth activities sponsored by the center. Popular activities include the annual Halloween costume parade and carnival and the Santa fly-in at Christmas time. For those unable to make deliveries, a pick-up may be arranged by calling 659-2934, 659-2398, or 659-2468.

Senior League journal

By ANDY FREMIER

Senior League action continued this week in the Carmel-Carmel Valley Senior Little League as the seven teams involved vied for places on the championship ladder.

Of the entire Carmel-Carmel Valley Senior Little League membership, 20 per cent have Carmel Valley post office addresses, and many more live within the boundaries of the Carmel Valley Little League. The division between graduates of Carmel and Carmel Valley Little Leagues is about even in this combined Senior Little League.

This week's games are outlined below:

On Tuesday, June 11, the Giants defeated the A's 6-5 in a game that has been protested and which will be held in abeyance pending decision by the protest committee. On Wednesday, June 12, the Dental Dodgers drilled the Buckeye Padres 10-0 behind the winning pitching of Steve Horan.

Thursday the Kiwanis Tigers defeated the Host Lions. On Saturday, the Dental Dodgers shut out the Mets 6-zip, with Tom Frincke being awarded the win and Kelly Ragan being tagged with the loss. In the second game, the CPYAA Athletics were edged by the Buckeye Padres 13-11 in a close game. In the final game of the afternoon, the Kiwanis Tigers defeated the K of C Giants 4-3 in a close game that saw Mark Elliott being awarded the win and Scott Thigpen getting the loss for the Giants.

On Monday, June 17, the Dodgers throttled the Lions 12-2 with Tim Poehlmann getting the win. It was the eightth win for the Dodgers and the tenth straight defeat for the Host Lions. The CPYAA Athletics upset the Rotary Mets on Tuesday night with a 14-4 defeat. It was only the second loss handed to the Mets. Strong hitting was given the A's by Alan Dewey, who hit .833 for the game.

On Wednesday, June 19, the Dental Dodgers squeaked by the Kiwanis Tigers 2-1 in the late innings. It was a pitching duel between John Frincke (W) and Mark Elliott (L), each pitcher giving up only one hit. In Thursday's game, Padres and K of C Giants ended up in a 7-7 tie, which will be played off in case either team is involved in the league chamionship.

On Saturday, June 22, the Kiwanis Tigers took the Padres 9-2 behind the pitching of Ron Lemos. Mark Elliott and Stu Giffin doubled for the Tigers. In the second game of the afternoon, the CPYAA Athletics broke out in the fifth inning to defeat the Host Lions 15-5. Paul Burdick of the Lions doubled in the losing cause. The Rotary Mets defeated the Dental Dodgers despite a sixth inning threat in which the Dodgers scored six runs. Kelly Ragan was credited with the win, Tom Frincke was tagged with his first loss.

On Monday, June 24, the Dental Dogers did in the Athletics 9-4 behind the winning pitching of John Frincke. Morgan Ward of the Dodgers and Tom Frincke of the Dodgers both slammed doubles for the victors.

Little League All Stars named

Saturday may have been just an ordinary summer day to most of the boys in Carmel Valley, but to 14 Little Leaguers it was Christmas, Disneyland, and the Fourth of July. These boys were named the 1974 Carmel Valley Little League All Stars.

The ritual takes place each season at this time when coaches, managers and board members meet to review the playing year of each boy on a major team.

League President Bill Conlan Sr. introduced the follwing boys to their friends and families in the stands, while past president Dick Klingensmith presented them with All Star pins and caps: "Indian" David Spicer, "Volunteer" Rick Hindman, "Tiger" Kevin Washington, "Wild Cat" Brent Eagling, "Indian" Matt Nottenkamper, "Wild Cat" Buz Fulton, "Lion" Randy Evans, "Wild Cat" Don Burkhart, "Volunteer' Jeff Hogans, "Wild Cat" Mike Matson, "Wild Cat" Frank Cummings, "Lion" Tom Vanetta, "Volunteer" Anthony Galang, and "Lion" Jody Moore.

Elected to manage the All Star team was "Wild Cat" coach, Augie Acuna, and "Lion" coach, Dick Crane, was named to coach the team.

These boys will now represent Carmel Valley in the district play-offs, with the first game scheduled for July 20 in Seaside. Be sure to mark your calendar for the drive to Seaside to support the boys from Carmel Valley.

Roper, Robert L. Speer, Dr. Wolfgang Titus and Michael Axinn. Directors retiring from the board are Harold R. Apger, Mrs. Roy Lassetter and Mrs. Edward Taylor.

Executive officers elected by the 36-member board are David Hughes, president; Robert M. Hinrichs, executive vice president; Sidney L. Lee, vice president; Helen Thompson, vice president; Charles Whitehead, treasurer; Anne Barrows, secretary; and Ruth Barker, assistant treasurer.

The annual treasurer's report presented by Harold R. Apger stated that not only had the budget of $155,000 been met but the $8,000 deficit remaining from the 1970-71 season was cleared away. This was in large part due to the Symphony Guild's Peninsula Chapter from whom $51,148 had been received during the 1973-74 season. A special note of appreciation was given to the retiring Guild President, Mrs. Avery Tompkins and to her board members for their remarkable accomplishments.

KNOW YOUR COUNTY GOVERNMENT

By WILLARD BRANSON
Fifth District Supervisor

Another one of the departments in the county government is the Department of Public Health. Its basic function is to protect, maintain, and improve the health of the citizens of Monterey County. With a staff of about 170 persons and a budget of approximately $5 million annually, the Health Department is concerned with the prevention and control of disease and with the protection of our community from disease.

A look at certain of the major programs of the health department will show how this department executes its preventive health functions.

The immunization program is designed to reduce the incidence of communicable disease by providing immunizations and encouraging public participation. The health department offers immunizations for polio, small pox, typhoid, measles, diptheria, whooping cough and cholera. All these diseases are under an acceptable level of control at the moment, but they have not been erradicated. All of us should keep our immunizations up to date -- particularly children.

The objective of the environmental health program is to identify and erradicate environmental health hazards. This is the work of health department sanitarians who enforce environmental health laws and legally established standards through inspections and investigations, and issuance of permits, when appropriate. The sanitarians are concerned with water supplies, restaurants, bakeries, food stores, swimming pools, public beaches, pet shops, milk supplies, and solid and liquid waste disposal.

The veneral disease control program was instituted in an effort to reduce the number of new cases of veneral disease, and the health department carries out an active program of case finding, diagnosis, and treatment in regularly scheduled clinics. Persons known to have been exposed to the disease are encouraged to consult their provate phsicians or to visit one of veneral disease clinics conducted by the health department.

CLINIC DIAGNOSIS and treatment is provided to patients in the strictest of confidence. In its public education programs, the health department seeks to develop public awareness of the prevalence of the disease, of its symptoms, and of ways to guard against it.

One of the health department's largest programs is the family planning program. The purpose is to make family planning services available to women throughout the county so that each may choose when and if she wishes to have a child.

The basic objective is to reduce the number of unwanted preganancies. Twenty-nine family planning clinics are conducted each month by the health department at locations throughout the county where birth control information, services, and supplies are available to anyone who wishes to take advantage of these services.

Another of the health department's major programs is mental health services. The function of the program is to assist those with mental, emotional, and socio-behavioral problems.

To provide for these needs, the county's mental health services program offers a comprehensive range of treatment facilities, including out-patient clinics; a day treatment center for patients who do not require 24-hour a day treatment, supervision, and care; short-term in-patient care at two of the hospitals in the county; and long-term care in state hospitals.

Certain of these services are provided by the Natividad Medical Center in Salinas and by the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula through contract with the health department and the county.

As a part of the mental health services program, the director of health services also serves as the public conservator for more than 100 persons who have been determined by the courts to be gravely ill and unable to care for themselves.

--To be concluded next week.

State issues order against subdivider

The State Department of Real Estate has issued a "desist and refrain" order against the developer of six homes on a 1.2-acre parcel below the Carmel Knolls subdivision.

The order, issued to developer Tom Bordonaro of Carmel, was made for alleged failure to meet state regulations requiring developers of subdivisions of five or more parcels to provide prospective buyers with public reports.

The required reports, according to Wes Arbig of the Monterey County Planning Department, detail for the would-be purchaser information on the conditions pertaining to the development, such as the location of schools, proximity of services, area transportation facilities, and the like.

Until the requirements of the state are met, the order has the effect of prohibiting the subdivider from selling any of the units in the development, Arbig said.

The use permit for the subdivision was granted in 1971 by the Monterey County Palnning Commission, and appealed to the board of supervisors, which voted in September of 1971 to uphold the use permit.

The appeal of the county planning commission decision was made by Mrs. Loretta Mauber, a property in Carmel Knolls.

The property involved is located at the northwest corner of the intersection of Carmel Knolls Drive and Carmel Valley Road. It has never been part of the official Carmel Knolls subdivision, although its proximity has led some residents to assume otherwise.

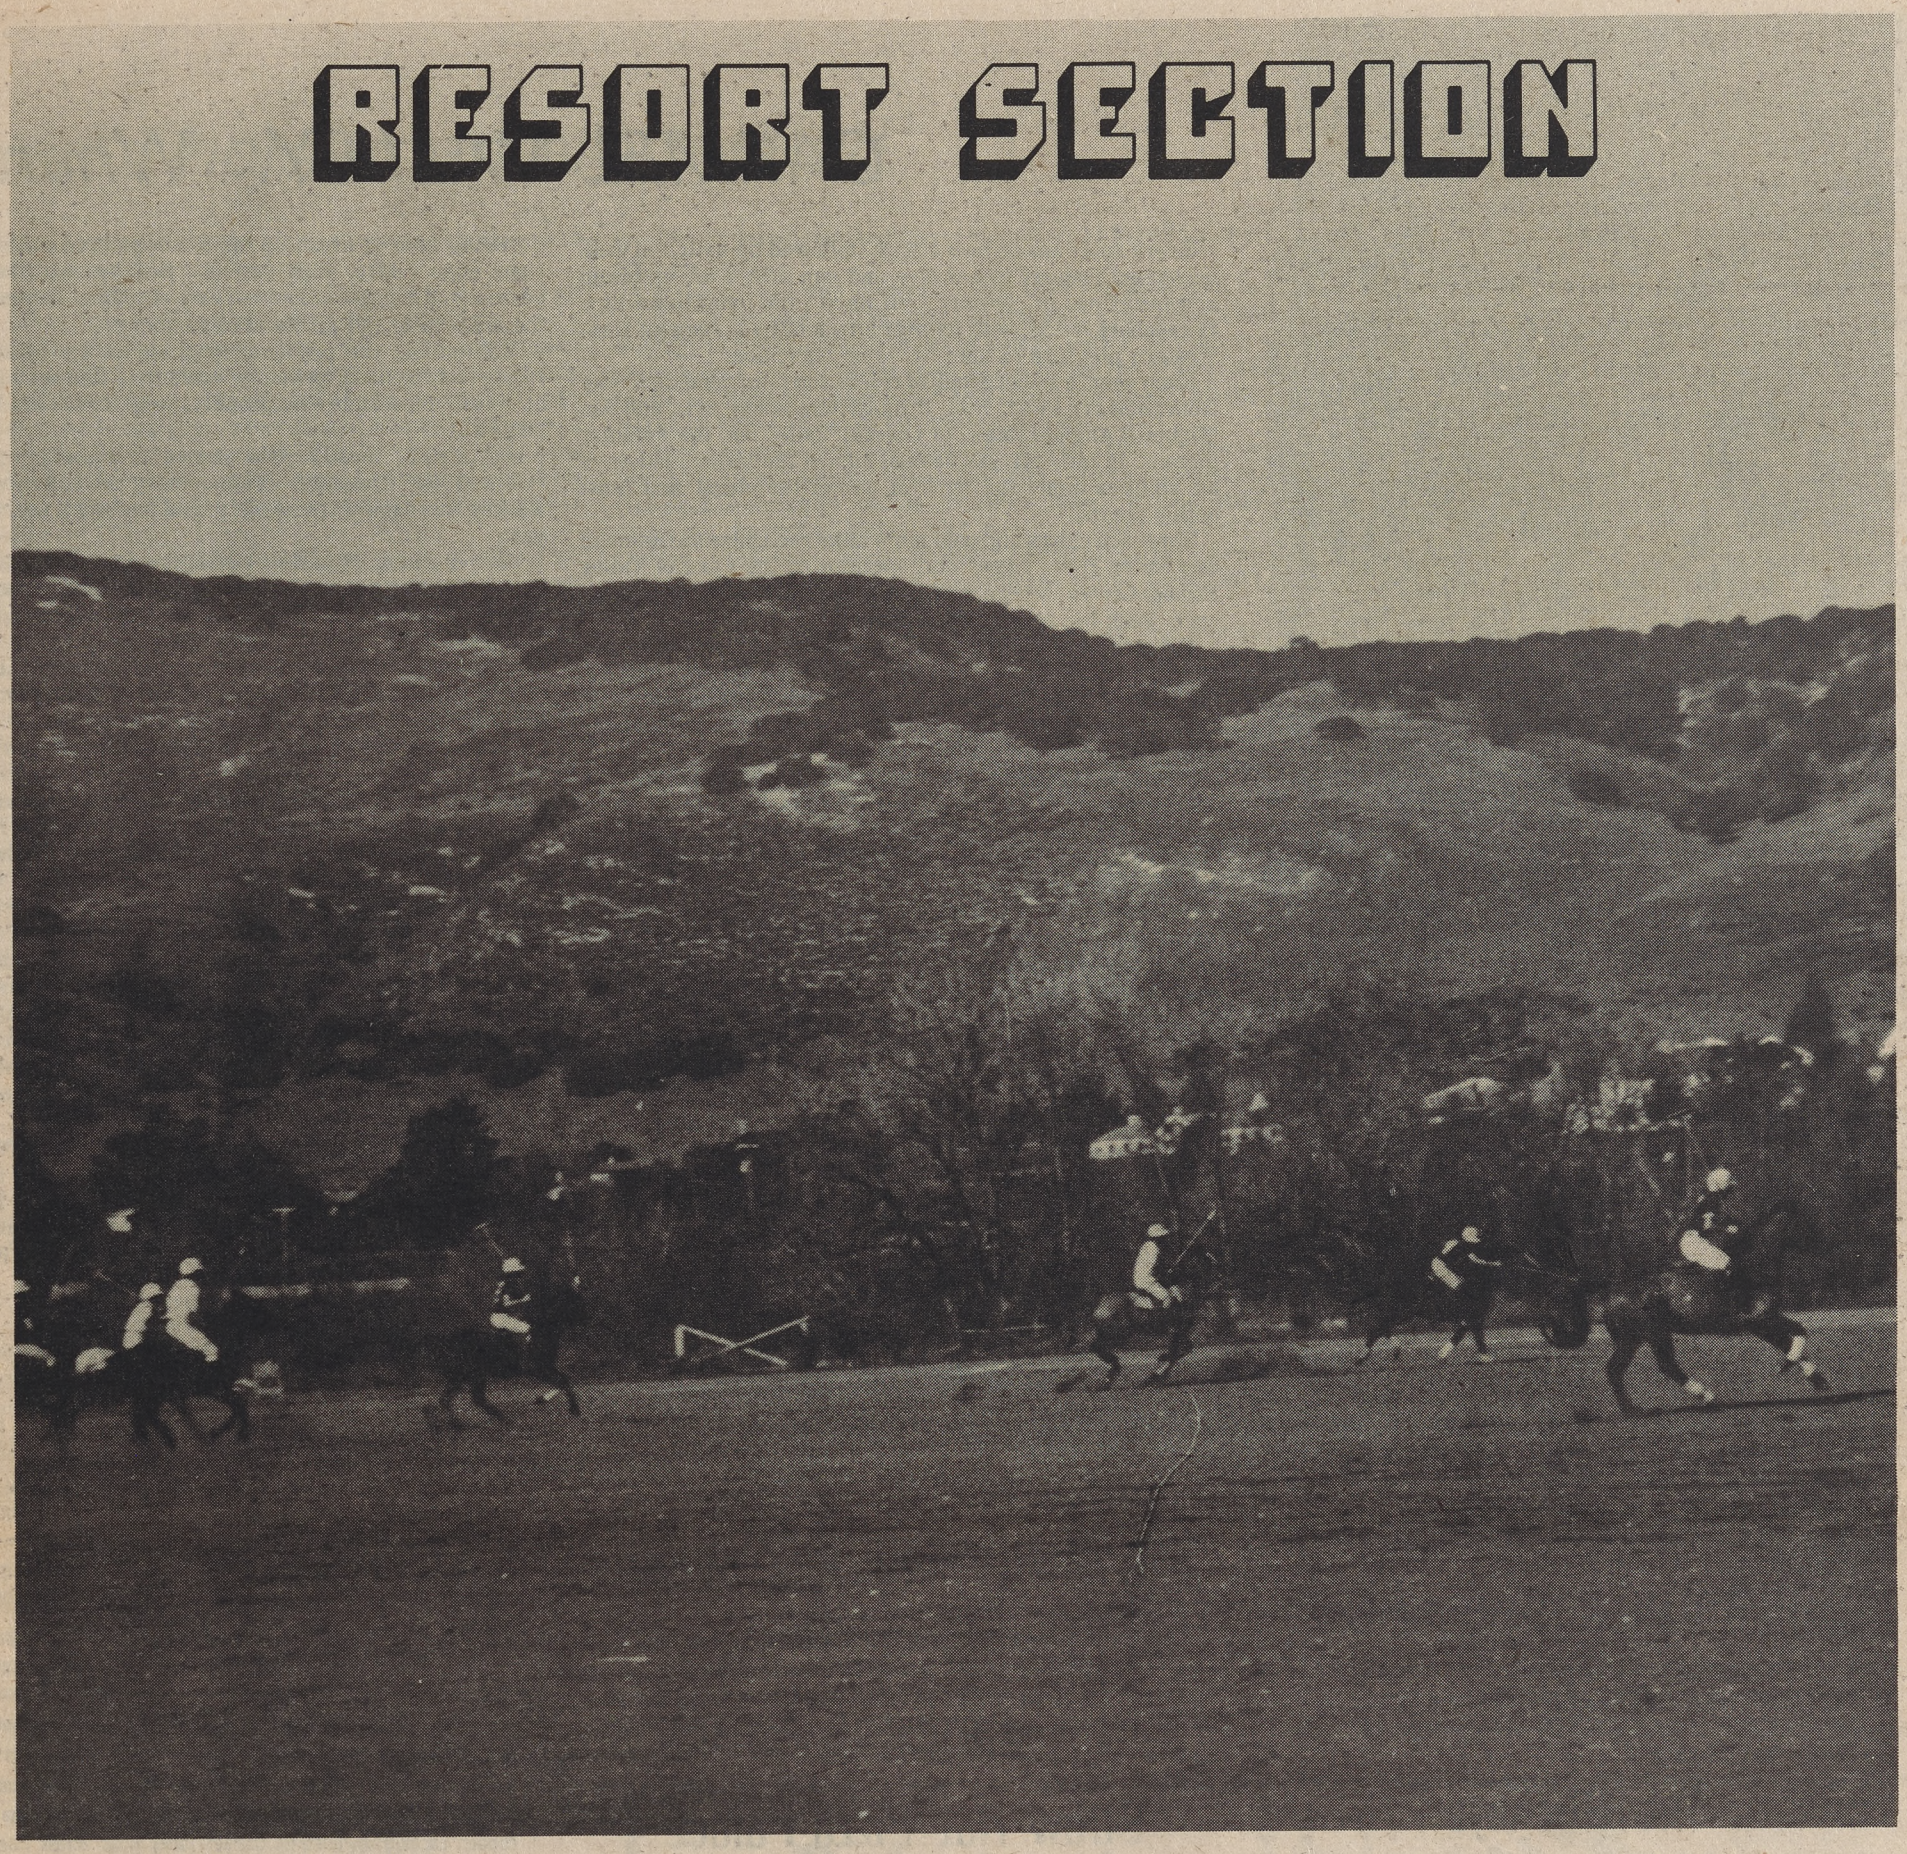
RESORT SECTION



THE CARMEL Valley polo team maintains a full and active calendar throughout the year. Above, the team follows the ball at Sue Sally Hale's Riding Center in Carmel Valley. Polo and other equestrian sports are burgeoning in the Valley, where more than 1000 head are stabled. Among young Valleyites, Mrs. Hale's riding center is the hub of activity and the place they go to develop their skills. Inside are more details on the Carmel Valley Riding Center and further information for visitors.

The June supplement to the

Carmel Valley Outlook

SUE SALLY Hale prepares to instruct another rider at the Carmel Valley Riding Center.

CARMEL VALLEY: Where horsen

Every sport has its own circuit, followed by avid and well-heeled enthusiasts who desire and can afford the optimum combination of events, climate and surroundings. Horesebackriding, with its myriad variations, ranging from Western pleasure to hunting, is no exception.

Each year, a select group of riders and fans wend their way from Southern Pines, N.C., through Scottsdale, Ariz. and San Miguel d'Allende, Mex. to Carmel Valley for the summer months. In the lush, sun-soaked hills of the Valley, riders of all abilities enjoy the thrill of one of the oldest and most active sports.

Bareback riders and polo buffs alike recognize the name of Sue Salley Hale, owner and operator of the Carmel Valley Riding Center, where more than 80 enthusiasts saddle up each week for equestrian training.

The center, established in the Valley seven years ago, under the name of "Sleepy Hollow," is anything but sedative. On the sprawling acreage behind Robinson Canyon, Mrs. Hale exacts earnest effort and hard work from the students whom she trains in private lessons.

"We're not interested in making kids look pretty. We turn out horsemen's horsemen here," explained Mrs. Hale, several of whose students have become riding counselors at Foxfield in L.A. the largest and perhaps best known riding school in the world.

Working with different horses in as many different situations as possible is the key to developing skill in the equestrian art, according to Mrs. Hale. Her students, who range in age from four to 60, catch their own horses, saddle and bridle, ride, clean bandage and doctor them.

One day a ten-year-old will be assigned to a cow pony, another day, it'll be a hunter or polo pony. Conversely, polo ponies are used for sorting cows and trail riding. "Horses need variety to keep them alert, too," Mrs. Hale reasons.

Unlike many other recognized riding schools, the Carmel Valley Riding Center does not have a formal dress code. Riders are required to wear helmets for safety purposes, but the rest of the outfit is up to the individual, and usually amounts to a long sleeved shirt and jeans.

"Being able to dress up for a competitive event gives a rider edge," Mrs. Hale stated. "Besides, we like to concentrate on the functional aspects of riding, rather than on the show ring and all its accoutrements."

Maintaining the physical condition of the horses at the riding center is a primary concern. "These horses are athletes," Mrs. Hale said proudly, "and for horses, fat is not beautiful."

Her string, mostly polo ponies and three-day horses (trained for dressage, cross-country and jumping) are worked five days of the week, with a two-week vacation each year.

Each morning, Mrs. Hale schools between two and six head before meeting her students for lessons. Throughout the day Mrs. Hale is assisted by her five children and "hands" Mary Lambert, Judy Ale and Donna Peterson.

In her spare time, Mrs. Hale, whose husband, Alex, is an estimator for Granite Construction Co. of Monterey, gets out her oils. Several of her paintings of equestrian scenes are displayed at the Buckeye Restaurant in Carmel Valley Village.

If painting is her past-time, polo is her love. Two years ago, after 20 years of playing circuit polo as a boy, Mrs. Hale was finally accepted as the first female member of the United States Polo Association. She is currently the only officially rated woman polo player in the country, as well as the only female who plays tournament polo in America.

When Mrs. Hale moved to the Peninsula 12 years ago, Dick Collins, who runs the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center, planted a grass field so that she and others could play locally. But it was Mrs Hale who actually formed the Carmel Valley Polo Club, which posts an active schedule of games at the Carmel Valley Riding Center in the winter and at Collins Field during the summer.

Among the team members are Judy Ale, Dr. David Borucki, Pat Herman, and Toni Rossi, and, until recently, Chuck Woodson and Ray Sumida.

Riding is growing in popularity in the Valley as well as in the country at large, according to Mrs. Hale. California, horsemen's horsemen are trained which once boasted Western only, is turning more and more toward Eastern style and technique.

"Ten years ago, we had three English riders at our ranch on Pt. Lobos; now we've got more than 60," she said.

Seated in the tack room, Mrs. Hale was interrupted frequently in her talk about the future of the sport as a steady stream of riders came into discuss lesson scheduling, purchase of second-hand gear, exercising of boarding horses and riding technique. Responding to each by name, Mrs. Hale casually inquired about family news, apparently enjoying a friendship with the scores of people who utilize the services of the center.

Formality and exclusivism are not part of the Hale philosophy. Recognizing that many youngsters would not qualify for participation in the National Horse Show held each summer at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Mrs. Hale organized the annual drill team competition, held at the center just prior to the show. Winners of the event are awarded the honor of carrying the colors at the fairgrounds.

"It's a thrill for most kids just to get inside the gates on horseback," Mrs. Hale enthused. Given the rigorous and practical training her students receive, chances are that they'll know as much about the business of riding and caring for their horses as any of the pros.

Just a few miles east of the center, nestled in the oak-studded hills above Carmel Valley Village is another well-known equestrian establishment, the Douglas Ranch, now in its 50th year as a private summer camp for children.

A few miles west of the riding center is the Red Barn, a boarding and training stable run by Ray Hackworth. Called upon frequently to judge shows throughout the nation, including at the Cow Palace in San Francisco, Hackworth devotes his undivided attention to schooling the 30 head under his care.

"It takes time and patience more than anything else to train a horse well," explained Hackworth, who spends an average of two and a half hours of steady work every day to train horses for the show ring. Mounted on the Palamino mare he trained, Hackworth won the $1000 stake at the National Horse Show in Monterey last year.

Given the abundant resources the Valley offers to horse lovers, it seems natural that many who have vacationed in the area eventually decide to settle here. Several subdivisions, including Robles del Rio and more recently, Hidden Hills have been designed specifically for horse owners, with a network of magnificent bridle paths laid across the valley and hills.

For visitors, the Valley offers several hotels and motels which border ranches and pastures: Blue Sky Lodge, Carmel Valley Inn, Hide-a-way Motel, Los Laureles Lodge, Robles del Rio Lodge and Valley Lodge.

The historic Los Laureles Lodge was, in fact, originally a hunting lodge for guests of the elegant Hotel Del Monte, operated years ago by Samuel F.B. Morse.

Don't forget the following dates of horse shows and events this summer:

June 30: Carmel Valley Polo Club games at 2 p.m., Collins Field Pebble Beach.

August 6-11: 1974 National Horse Show, Monterey County Fairgrounds, Monterey.

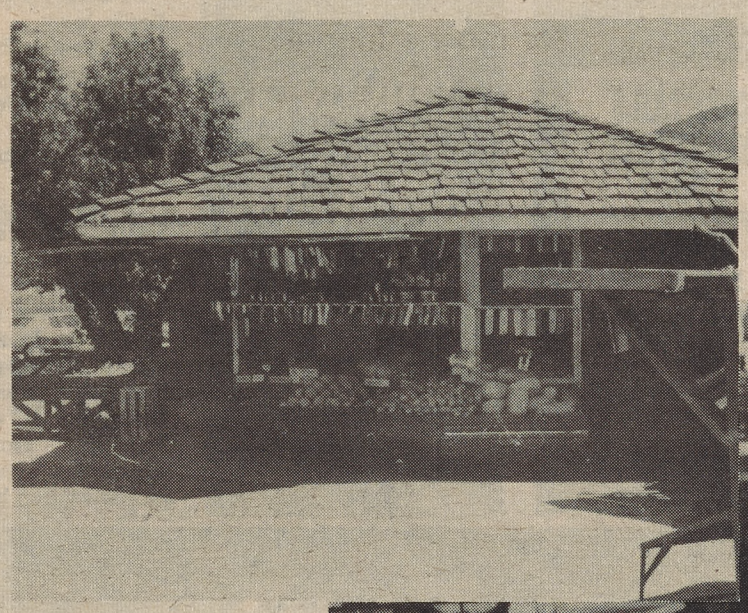
Early summer harvesting in Carmel Valley



Sunset views:

The Bach Festival's coming!

By FRANK H. RILEY
Sunset Center Director

A FEW DAYS after you read this, the participants of the 1974 Carmel Bach Festival will be arriving for two weeks of intensive rehearsal and preparation for one of Carmel's biggest and most prestigious annual events.

Much of the Sunset Center complex will be utilized by the festival. Instrumentalists, volcalists, conductors, stage managers, all will be swarming around the place and bits and pieces of their various products will continually waft up and down the corridors and ooze out from under the eaves. All this to the end that you may enjoy a wonderful series of concerts, lectures, and recital from the July 15 through the 28.

I am told that many of the concerts are already sold out, but I am sure that if you act now and don't put it off any longer you will still be able to get tickets for some of the events. Come to Room 11 at the southern end of the Sunset Center complex or phone 624-1521 for ticket information.

While all of this is using our facilities, we will be busy planning for the use of them after the Festival is over. The Monterey County Symphony, Chamber Music Society, and Carmel Music Society have already scheduled their various concert series.

Explorama is returning with its fine array of travel-adventure films, and Sunset Center will be offering a new Carmel Festival of Dance Series. Add to this the August Sunday Concert Series by the Hidden Valley Symphony Orchestra and a planned return to activity by the Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula, and it's easy to see that we have a pretty full theatre schedule already. We would expect that several touring shows will also decide to book our theatre before the season is over.

OUR ARTISTS in residence will be operating to a limited extent through the summer and will resume in full force in September. Robert Horne in Room Five teaches painting and drawing for beginners as well as for more advanced students. Barbara West in Room Seven specializes in portraiture while in the same studio, Royden Martin offers life classes every week. A large group of artists offer workshop-instruction opportunities in Room 15 for ceramic sculpture, built-up pottery, etching, lithography, and other graphics and serigraphing.

On Mission Street in Room 13 Lilli Slevig offers ballet for children and adults and a very popular women's rhythmic exercise class.

'Beauties of the Far East'

Architectural and sculptural "Beauties of the Far East" in India, Bangkok, Angkor Wat, Hong Kong and Japan will be the subject of a series of five lectures at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art beginning July 11.

The lectures will be given at 10 a.m. on Thursdays by Sophie Harpe, one of the founders of the museum when it was the local chapter of the American Federation of the Arts. Also, whe was the first director of the museum and former head of the Monterey high school art department, having received her degree in architecture from the New York School of Design.

Before coming to Monterey, Miss Harpe was an interior designer in Hollywood, working with the William Lee Woollett architectural firm.

Miss Harpe's lectures will be based on her experiences on three different trips to the Far East. During her sabbatical in India she met the royal family of Jasdan in Delhi and spent three months as their guest. She made two other trips, one of them, at the invitation of the maharani to decorate the apartment of the prince of Capurthala when he was to marry the princess of the house of Jasdan.

The fee for the lecture series is $7.50 and $5 for museum members. Individual lectures will be $2.

Sierra Club urges delay in approval for PG & E conversion

The Sierra Club urged AMBAG and the State Lands Commission this week to defer action on PG&E's Moss Landing superport application until it is known which agencies of the state and federal governments are going to control the conditions under which such superports are built and regulated.

In a statement presented to directors of the Association of Monterey Bay Area Government, the conservation group called attention to the fact that the California Assembly Select Committee on Deepwater Ports is nearing completion of a study to set up guideline's "on how decisions are to be made regarding such facilities on our coast."

Moreover, it said, the House of Representatives in Washington recently passed a bill to established a licensing authority for construction of superports, and the plan being prepared under the Coastal Conservation Act (Prop. 20) will include recommendations on deepwater port and marine terminal facilities.

"It seems clear that neither AMBAG nor the State Lands Commission should act on the pending environmental data statement, or the associated application by PG&E, until the air has been cleared," said Rod Holmgren, a member of the Club task force which prepared an analysis of the environmental data statement.

The Moss Landing Task Force included a marine biologist, a geologist, a physicist, a chemical engineer and an environmental planner. Its members were drawn from Sierra Club's northern California regional conservation committee, the Santa Cruz Group of Loma Prieta Chapter, and Ventana Chapter.

The Sierra Club statement attacked all three of PG&E's main arguments for bringing 130,000 dead weight ton (DWT) supertankers to Monterey Bay. In response to the contention that use of the gigantic tankers would save PG&E $5 million a year, it pointed out that the savings would probably be much smaller since PG&E has already cut its estimate of the amount of oil needed this year by 50 per cent. Also any cost-benefit analysis must consider that "the larger the tanker, the more oil potentially can be spilled, and the higher the cleanup costs," the Sierra Club said.

PG&E's second argument, that large tankers would reduce the likelihood of an oil spill, doesn't ackowledge that "the damage caused by grounding, collision or crackup of a 130,000-ton supertanker in Monterey Bay would be incalculable and would last for generations, it said.

The environmental data satement contains "no discussion of the design of the supertankers which would be brought into Monterey Bay by this proposal," so ignores evidence that most tankers of more than 50,000 tons have serious structural defeats which invite disaster.

"Most such tankers have single bottoms, despite the immence cargoes they carry. They are powered by single boilers and single engines, which leave them dead in the water when either boiler or engine fails, and have single propellers," the club said.

The third argument advanced by PG&E, that fewer small tankers are available, is not supported by its own statements. The PG&E data shows that 86 per cent of the world's present tankers are in sizes up to 50,000 DWT, which gives the Moss Landing Phase I facility access "to all but a small proportion of the world's tanker fleet," the Sierra Club said.

The statement hit at the growth-inducing potential of the project, pointing to the environmental statement appendix prediction that "in a short period of time...it probably would be desired to extend the pipelines about 3,000 feet to a point which is three ship lengths from the depth contour where a ship of the 300,000-DWT class might run aground."

The Club commented that "even if PG&E does not intend now to expand its facilities, the mere existence of a terminal capable of handling 130,000 DWT tankers makes it more probable that Monterey Bay would be considered as a site for a single-point mooring facility."

Apart from the dangers of a catastrophic spill in the bay caused by structural weaknesses of supertankers, the environmental impact of a spill on Elkhorn Slough "is not adequately treated in the EDS," the Club said.

Project director named for proposed golf resort

Landmark Lands Corp. and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Unique Golf Concepts, Inc., which recently secured an option to purchase the 1,700-acre former Holt Ranch in the mid Valley, has announced the appointment of a project director for the golf resort development which they propose for the site.

Kaye Chandler, formerly a land planner with the Denver, Colo. firm of Harmon, O'Donnell and Henninger Associates, Inc., will move to Carmel Valley next week to assume full-time work on the project, including the handling of all matters pertaining to county approval according to Ernie Vossler, vice president of Landmark Lands and Unique Golf Concepts.

Vossler had earlier stated that a championship 18-hole golf course, several hundred condominiums, a five-acre tennis ranch, clubhouse, lodge, swimming pools and "amenity" shops were included in preliminary plans for the project, to be known as Carmel Valley Ranch.

Vossler stressed that no decision has yet been reached on the number of units to be built on the site, 365 acres of which Landmark deems developable.

The property is zoned for resort use, with a permitted densityof one unit per acre, amounting to a total of between 500 and 1,500 units.

Vossler also announced that a presentation of preliminary plans for the golf ranch, complete with a four-foot by eight-foot three-dimensional model, would be made to the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association within eight weeks. At that time, he stated, local residents will be able to speak directly with the project team, planners and architects.

Jack Van Zander, of the firm of George Bestor & Associates, Inc., engineers for the project, stated that preparation by the firm of a draft environmental impact report to be presented to the county planning commission, is expected to be completed by September of 1974. Van Zander lives at the end of Holt Road, adjacent to the property in question.

Progress report issued on sanitary district

A progress report has been submitted to the Carmel Sanitary District by Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco on the firm's secondary effluent capacity testing program which is underway on the eastern portion of the Odello artichoke fields.

The testing program, which has been given a projected completion date of mid-November, 1974 is intended to assess the feasibility of the Odello property as a secondary waste disposal site.

Findings to date are inconclusive. According to Dave Kennedy, who is heading the project, not enough testing data has been compiled to make a prediction about the capabilities of the property.

He says the principal point of concern now is the "chemical limitations" of the property. In order to accommodate the amount of secondary effluent neccessary to function properly as a disposal site, the land must be capable of assimilating a number of chemicals, including nitrogens, phosphorous, and salt.

Kennedy says the sanitary district had problems related to chemical assimilation 25 years ago when it tried to utilize open land for secondary effluent disposal.

In response to criticism of the lengthy testing program expressed at the last sanitary district meeting, Kennedy said he feels the program can be "stepped up" to a September completion date:

"We won't have as much backup data to go on that way. We will have to interpelate a little more," he explained.

The recent progress report, which will be updated frequently between now and the completion of the project, shows that the property is capable of an effluent application rate of 0.75 to 1.75 million gallons per day during the dry season.

WE LOVE a parade. We like watching them on TV We like sitting on the curb and watching them. We like appearing in parades. Best of all, we like appearing with out horses or ponies in a parade.

Nor are we alone, The streets are lined with parade lovers all along the parade's announced routes. There are also a considerable number of horse lovers who appear in parade after parade.

The horse hater of our family says we're all a bunch of horses' behinds showing off our horses' behinds. The horse hater of our family says a number of things which shouldn't appear in print.

Most parades are annual affairs, the dates of which are announced more than a year in advance. This allows paraders plenty of time to plan their itineraries. Annual parades are sponsored by a permanent organization with a year round address. This can be a chamber of commerce, a service club, or a special parade organization.

Parades are divided into divisions, and prizes are offered in each category to induce persons and groups to enter. There are prizes, for instance, for the best band, best float, best drill team, and best youth group. A judges stand is set up somewhere along the route, not always midway.

Judging is not very formal. Judges are usually members of the organizing committee or persons who the committee wishes to honor. Few of the judges know as much about parades as many of those who enter a lot of them.

When a person or group wishes to enter a parade, they write the organizing committee, which sends an entry blank. Entry blanks are mailed automatically each year to all the entrants from the previous year.

There is space on the form for the entrant to list other parades which he has entered and the prizes won, other honors or interesting facts. Supposedly this information will be read alound as the entrant passes the reviewing stand for the edification of spectators nearby. If the parade is to be televised, a xeroxed list of all these blurbs is given to the TV announcers.

IF THE entrant has a good, clear publicity-type photo, he is encouraged to send it along with his parade entry. Parades are most usually to promote business. The committee is hungry for free publicity shots to promote their parade. Thus a publicity-hungry entrant can get a lot of newspaper space and TV exposure by sending his publicity material to the committee well ahead of parade time.

Judges are much influenced by the information on those entry blanks. Just as the newsmen do, they each get a xeroxed copy. Obviously if an outfit has won a lot of prizes, the safe thing for an inexperienced judge to do is to award it top prize again. Some unscrupulous entrants invent a string of honors for themselves to impress the judges. We have never heard of a committee checking out the information provided.

In divisions where the entries have no track record--like children's decorated bicycles--the judging is mostly eeny, meeny, miny, mo.

Horses may be entered in several mounted or vehicle divisions. Best costume, men's or women's is a popular award to go after. Best dressed cowboy or cowgirl also draws a lot of entrants. Best silver entry is a category only in the biggest parades. The silver outfits exhibited in parades are often custom made only by a few saddlemakers and are for parading only. The "silver" is often nickle or other silver-colored metals. They typical silver outfit has a black leather bridle with silver plates and conchos strung down the horse's face on tiny chains. The bits are often elaborate, with chiseled or incised cheekpieces. Many parade horses wear a version of the spade bit, not because the horse works best in them, but because they are the ones most easily obtained with fancy cheekpieces.

The silver saddle is always a western or Mexican style cowboy saddle with skirts and stirrup fenders patterned with metal decorations. Behind the saddle a heavy skirt hangs nearly to the street. This is a special place to display decorative silver patterns, often with the owners name worked in.

The silver outfits cost as much as a Ford car or a good horse, but many people spend that amount of money on skiing, flying, golf carts, or travel trailers. Entering parades in the silver category is just as legitimate a hobby as any other.

We slept on a sidewalk in Pasadena last December 31 in order to admire the Tournament of Roses Parade. This very long parade is fairly dull as parades go.

There are only three apparent categories of entrants--marching bands, flower-covered floats (for which the parade is famous) and silver mounted horses. For years we had heard the TV announcers comment on how wonderful, beautiful, and larger-than-life, the horses in this parade were. Then as the mounted groups approached the TV camera, the show would cut away to a commercial.

We were therefore extremely curious about the "magnificent" horses. Well, the silver saddles are, indeed, magnificent--more chromium than a Cadillac. Some of the horses were okay, and some were as shaggy and scrawny as the "before" picture in a vitamin supplement ad. "Quick, camera number two. Cut to a commercial!"

Generally when parade committees receive and accept a completed entry blank (entries are practically never turned down), they write and tell the prospective parader where and when to assemble. It doesn't take any money to enter a parade but it takes a lot of fortitude.

Horse entries are deemed to take as little space as a decorated bicycle. "Squeeze the horse trailer in next to the band bus,"--no one allotted the bus driver parking space either. A series of blocked-off streets and trash-covered vacant lots are usually the chosen assembling area for a parade. Lots of volunteer Lions and Kiwanians run around with clipboards. Some of them even know what they're doing. Salinas and Pacific Grove parades are especially shaggy.

The first elements of a parade are assigned the same assembling time as all the other elements. Horses are usually placed at the rear of the parade in deference to the bandsmen's shoe polish. That means the horsemen sit around in anticipation until they are the only ones left on the lot.

Often, the horsemen never get to see the actual parade and hear only a few distant snatches of band music. For them, the parade is a long line of happy faces, but that's worth much more than prizes or publicity.

C.V. Manor donates $4000 for MPC scholarships

Residents of the Carmel Valley Manor, retirement center in Carmel Valley, have donated more than $4,000 to cover the educational expenses at Monterey Peninsula College of students employed at the center.

According to Peter DeHase, assistant administrator at the manor, 17 student employes will each recive a $250 grant for which they may reapply in coming years. DeHase said the manor is the largest employer of students on the Peninsula.

The money will be deposited at MPC and students will be able to draw from the account up to $250. Everett 'brick' Halstrom, administrator at Carmel Valley Manor, said more than $16,000 has been donated in the form of grants to MPC students by the residents of the manor.

DeHase said the students are employed in either the dining room or in the medical center and work three to four hours each evening, five days a week. "We are very interested in education, and we try to do anything we can do to help these students to further their education," he said. The grant program is now in its fourth year.

Organic gardener

By LEE HALL

Pest control

THE ORGANIC gardener objects to powerful insecticides or fungicides, especially if they are toxic to people or pets. There is growing evidence that ingestion of small doses of these chemicals over a long period of time does have a cumulative and harmful effect. Some of the toxic pest control chemicals cannot be removed by washing or even cooking.

I will discuss here only those pest controls that are harmless to mammals, are biodegradable within ten days, are readily available in the home or locally, and are inexpensive.

The first thing to remember is that, with only one exception, preventative spray treatment is not only unneccessary but potentially harmful. Rather than improve the situation, widespread preventative spraying will probably kill all the pests' natural enemies and thus ensure a later attack by the pests.

Organically grown produce is seldom attacked by insects. Plenty of compost, mulch, a high humous content in the soil and adequate water promote rapid plant growth. Insects rarely attack vigorously growing plants, but wait instead for the plants to pass their prime or wither from not enough or too much water. To maintain a low incidence of insect attack, a gardener should remove plants which have passed their prime immediately from the garden and put them on the compost heap.

Insects attacking weakened plants can easily transfer to healthy plants. At the end of the growing season, it is usually better to put all plant residue through many insect eggs or larvae "over winter" underground.

The exception to the preventative spray rule involves the use of dormant spray. Many fruit and nut trees shed their leaves during the winter, and insects then lay their eggs near the little pits or twigs where new leaves will emerge in the spring. The spray simply stops up the breathing pores in the insect eggs, thus preventing them from ever hatching.

Dormant spray is usually a thin, light petroleum oil. Some types have a sulfur or copper compound included to kill fungi, such as peach leaf curl. The spraying is usually repeated three times during the winter, with the last application as near to budding time as possible.

Fruit and nut trees should have the area under them cleared of weeds and debris, which provide a home for many insects that feed at night. Nocturnal feeders that need daytime shade include snails and slugs, earwigs and pill bugs. Clearing under the trees also helps detect any hills, which do little damage themselves, but often bring their aphids, which are very destructive.

Dusty leaves encourage red spider, tiny mites that attack under the leaves. They are so small that use of a magnifiying glass is often required to see them and their tiny webs.

A good preventative is to spray the leaves occasionally with clear water early enough in the day to allow the leaves to dry before dark. Ladybugs love red spiders nearly as much as they do aphids. (Red spiders are especially prone to attack citrus trees.)

APHIDS ON broad leaf plants, such as corn, can be controlled by spraying them with a jet of plain water. The aphids cannot get back on the plant once it has been sprayed, and so they die. Ants can, however, bring back a new herd of aphids. If this occurs, another spraying will be necessary.

I use water sprays on corn, artichokes, chard, cabbage and several other vegetables. The spray won't work on curly leaf kale or other camplex leaves. Ladybugs, of course, devour hundreds of aphids daily.

One of the nature books I read some time ago suggests rolling up corregated cardboard and putting it out in the garden. The article in the book said earwigs would crawl into all the little corrugations of the roll of cardboard for their daytime snooze. All the gardener had to do, according to the article, was to pick up the roll of cardboard in the morning, unroll it over a can of hot water, and viola! -- boiled earwigs. I guess my earwigs hadn't read the book because I have tried the trick three nights and haven't caught one earwig yet. yet.

If all the care in the world does not prevent insect attack, there are some insecticides that are biodegradable and not nearly as toxic to people as some of those sold. These include those made from plants, specifically, malathion (not parathion), ryania, pyrethrum and rotenone. Plotenone is very toxic to fish.

All of these degrade in a matter of days, so are acceptable for spot use. Not even these should be "sluiced" over the entire yard or area because they will kill laydbugs, lace wings, preying mantes and other "good" insects.

In previous columns, I have mentioned a new specific biological treatment for oak moths. The spelling came out a little garbled. It is a bacteria, harmless to all warm-blooded animals but very effective against capterpillars. It is called Bacillus Thuringiensis, which goes under the common name of thuricide.

A good general rule for the garden is that if a particular plant, say a bean or squash plant, looks bad, and no reason can be found, it should be pulled up and removed from the garden. Possibly it's the result of a defective seed, or maybe a gopher nibbled the roots. But sometimes, it can be a fungus or root maggots attacking the plant. It is usually safer to remove the plant than to take a chance that the trouble will spread to other healthy plants.

On one occasion, I had a dozen tomato plants in a row. Suddenly tomato wilt started on one end. I didn't know what it was, and didn't pull the affected plant. It was a matter of time before the wilt had marched down the row and killed all twelve tomato plants.

Cypress makes clean sweep at Region XIII Jr. Olympics

The Cypress Swim Club won gold, silver, and bronze medals at the 1974 National AAU Region XIII Junior Olympic Synchronized Swimming Championships this past weekend at Walnut Creek, Calif.

The smallest club entered in the three-day championship, Cypress swimmers won first, second, third, fourth, and fifth places over the top competitors from the five district associations in the western region, comprised of the Central California, Pacific, Pacific Southwest, Southern Pacific, and Southern Nevada Associations of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Pacing the team were Kathryn Blevens and Gerri Brandly, who won the gold medals in the 15-17 duet competition with a decisive score of 92.534 over their nearest rivals. Jane Goeppinger and Ellen Legg of the Riverside Aquettes, whose score was 90.392. Kathryn and Gerri, who also won the Pacific AAU competition in the qualifying round three weeks ago, were the only PAAU swimmers to remain in the top three in this event. The Southern Pacific AAU made a strong challenge to the PAAU's traditional supremacy, pushing the third place duet of Kathy Lull and Mary Ann Parker of the Tustin Meraquas, with a score of 89.180, ahead of Tara Cameron and Megan Evart of the San Francisco Merionettes, whose score was 87.593.

The silver medal came to Cypress in the 10-and-under solo competition in a surprise victory for Cheryl Braud, who had qualified third in the PAAU qualifying meet three weeks ago, and who placed fourth in the compulsory figures competition at this meet. Cheryl overcame all this in the finals to defeat both the first place qualifier from Sourthern Pacific and one of the "superstars" in this age group in the Pacific AAU to come within .9 of winning the championship for Region XIII. Barbara Callaghan of Walnut Creek Aquanuts won this event with a score of 66.833.

In the team competition, Cypress won fourth place in 11-12 teams, with Allyson Braud, Cheryl Braud, Paris Oliver, Kerry Wald, and Pavia Wald, with Cynthia Bottero as alternate, increasing their score almost three points over the PAAU qualifying meet, but not enought ot overcome the bonus point rule which allows one-half point for each swimmer over four on a team. Thus they were defeated by the eight-girl teams from the Santa Clara Aquamaids, Walnut Creek Aquanuts, and Tustin Meraquas in that order.

The 15-17 Cypress team placed fifth, again suffering from the bonus point rule. This team of Kathryn Blevens, Gerri Brandly, Debbie Jameson, Tina Wald, and Liz Wilson, with Robin Currier as alternate, actually placed second in routine scores, but was edged to fifth by eight-girl teams from Santa Clara, Walnut Creek Tustin, and Glendale, with only five one-hundredths of a point separating Cypress and Glendale. Kathryn Blevens also captured a fifth place in the 15-17 solo event.

In figures competition, Gerri Brandly and Allyson Braud both won third places in their respective age groups, while Cheryl Braud won fourth in hers. With 201 swimmers participating in the meet, which is limited to the top three qualifiers from each district association of the AAU, other Cypress placements were as follows:

10-and-under: Paris Oliver, 15th;

11-12: Pavia Wald, 31st; Kerry Wald, 44th; and Cynthia Bottero, 48th;

15-17: Kathryn Blevens, 8th; Debbie Jameson, 18th; Tina Wald, 39th; Robin Currier, 44th; and Liz Wilson, 45th.

Cypress made synchronized swimming history three weeks ago by qualifying every one of its entries in the Pacific AAU Junior Olympic Championships to compete in the prestigious Regional Junior Olympic Chamionships.

Book auction benefit

A benefit "Dutch auction" book sale, designed to put stars in your eyes, information in your head and still leave money in your pocket, will be held in the patio at Sunset Center, Carmel, from noon to 4 p.m. on Saturday, June 29.

The Friends of Photography will offer more than 1000 brand new books on every possible subject. There will be current bestsellers, books on survival, crafts, and nature, children's books, and a special selection of art books, as well as hundreds of others.

The books will be sold by "Dutch auction," which means that books will first be sold at list price, then a bell will periodically ring to signify that the price will be reduced by another 10 per cent each period until the books are sold. Some books will thus be offered at as much as 70 per cent off list, or more.

This is a fund-raising benefit for the Friends of Photography, a non-profit educational organization dedicated to creative photography. Book browsers are encouraged to see the exhibit of noted social research photographer Marion Palfi in the FOP gallery just off the patio. The gallery will be open during the hours of the sale.

Further information can be obtained by calling 624-6330.
